JOHN Y. W. 1-1-1

The Following are said to have been names of some of the dying words of some of the world's greatest celebrities. We quote them, for it is not an unprofitable study

 to consider how far the habits and education of life prevail at the moment of death.
 Head of the army.—Napoleon.
 I must sleep now.—Byron.
 It matters not how the head lieth.—
Walter Raleigh.
 Kiss me, hardy.—Lord Nelson.

Don't give up the ship.—Lawrence.
I'm shot, if I don't believe I'm dying—ambassador Thurlow.
Is this your fidelity.—Nero.
Chasp my hand, my dear friend, die.
After.
Give Bayroles a chair.—Lord Ches- terfield.
God preserve the emperor.—Haydn.
The artery ceases to beat.—Hatter.
Let the light enter.—Gothie.

All my possessions for a moment of me.—Queen Elizabeth.
What! is there no bribing death?
Cardinal Beaufort.
I have loved my God, my father, and liberty.—Madame de Stael.
Be serious.—Grotius.
Into thy hands; O Lord.—Tasso.
It is small, very small, indeed (clasping her neck).—Anna Bolyn.
I will be gone, we are up, and for

I pray you see me early to-morrow morning, as I am coming down, let me shift for myself (ascending the scaffold).—Thomas More.

Don't let that awkward squad fire over my grave.—Burns.

I feel as if I were myself again.—Sir Walter Scott.

I resign my soul to God, and my daughter to my country.—Thomas Jefferson.

It is well.—Washington.
Independence for ever.—Adams.
This is the last of earth.—J. Q. Adams.
I wish you to understand the true principles of the government. I wish them carried out. I ask no more.—Harrison.
I have endeavored to do my duty.—General Taylor.
There is not a drop of blood on my hands.—Frederick, King of Denmark.

 You spoke of refreshments, my Emilia.
 Take my last notes; sit down by piano;
 Here, sing them with the hymn of your sainted mother. Let me hear, once more, those notes which have been my solace and my delight.—Mozart.
 A dying man can do nothing easy,—
Franklin.
 Let not poor Nelly starve.—Charles

Charity.
Night kissed the young rose, and i bent softly to sleep. Stars shone, and pure dew drops hung upon its bosom and watched its sweet slumbers. Morning came with its dancing breezes, and they whispered to the young rose and it awoke joyous and smiling. Lightly it danced to and fro in all the loveliness of health and young innocence. Then came the ardent sun-god, sweeping from the east, and smote the young rose

with its scorching rays, and it fainted Now the gentle breeze which had been gamboled over the sea, pushing on the housebound bark, sweeping over him and dale, by the neat cottage and the still brook, turning the old mill, fanning the brow of childhood—came tripping along on her errand of mercy and love, and when she saw the young rose hastened to kiss it, and fondly bated its forehead in cool refreshing sha-ders, and the young rose revived and looked and smiled in gratitude to the kind breeze; but she hurried quickly away, for she soon perceived that a delicious fragrance had been poured over her wings by the grateful rose; and the kind breeze was glad at heart, and went away singing through the trees. The charity, like the breeze, gathers fragrance from the drooping flowers it refreshes, and unconsciously reaps a reward in the performance of its office.

The bed was innocent of linen of any kind and was saturated with water. There was indecisibly filthy and the walls drenched with moisture and filled with fungi. On the bed stood two tin plates that had probably been used for some liquid and never cleaned from the moment they were first soiled.

In the corner of the room was a keg of fresh herrings the maggots in which were more numerous than the fish, and rivaled them in size. On a small table nearby were two bottles containing the perfume of his bitter life and undimmed fame to his death. Mr. Fudge was reclining on the board of his brother's cot and in partial view his clothing had been torn off except his shirt. Thus died Edwidge E. Fudge, once a millionaire, wealth, position and celebrity.
